The PROS Executive Committee

President

The President shall safeguard the Society’s moral interests and shall monitor compliance with its statutes. He or she shall supervise the Society's business and shall monitor compliance with the decisions of the Executive Committee. The President shall bear the role of the legal, judicial and extrajudicial representative of the Society in all civil acts. He or she may delegate the exercise of his or her representative functions to other members of the Executive Committee. He or she will supervise organization of the biennial Congress according to the rules set out in the Society’s By-Laws. He or she will be a member of the Executive Committee and will participate in all of the Society's meetings and the taking of all decisions.

The President will remain in office for 2 years following completion of his or her term in the role of Past President. In this capacity he or she will participate in the management of the society

Past President

General Secretary

He or she will be a member of the Executive Committee and publish the minutes for General Assembly and Executive Committee meetings. He or she may designate an assistant from the hired managing body to draft the minutes. He or she (or a designee) will hold a register of the proceedings of the General Assembly and the Executive Committee meetings. He or she will draw up a general summary of each Congress and will update the list of members and all general information required for faithful operation of the Society.

Treasurer

He or she shall be a member of the Executive Committee and shall monitor the Society’s accounts. He or she shall hold detailed accounts and shall report on the said accounts at each General Assembly or at such time as the Executive Committee may request. He or she shall be responsible for arranging a annual audit of the Society’s accounts.

Low and Middle Income Countries (LMIC) representative
He or she helps to establish educational programmes and provide liaison with other societies active in support of low and medium income countries

Education (North America) + Education (Europe)

The two positions will coordinate with the Ex-officio Voting Member to organize the Scientific Committee for each meeting. They will be in charge of organizing teaching courses and on-line teaching materials in addition to any functions at the meeting.

Membership

He or she shall be a member of the Executive Committee and shall monitor the Society’s memberships. He or she shall hold detailed accounts on membership reports, and suggest improvements on membership management.

Allied Professionals

At least one member is medical physicist. The other member can be represented by radiographer. They should represent their health professions and are in charge of providing parts of the biennial congresses related to their profession.

SIOP Liaison (ex officio)

He or she will act as a liaison between SIOP and PROS. He or she will coordinate meetings and educational and scientific activities between the two societies.

Newsletter

He or she shall be a member of the Executive Committee and shall collect all information, comments on articles or thoughts you wish to send to him/her. He or she write regular newsletters on events which which PROS members feel it is important to share. These may concern scientific articles, congresses, thoughts on training for young people, the handling of tumours in children by health authorities.

Website

He or she will provide and up-date the content of the web-site.